

Market 'packed all day long' for fair trade family fun day

Wakefielders celebrated their title as Quebec's first fair trade town with a family fun day May 3. From 10 a.m. to 1 p.m., local producers set up tables outside Solstice bookstore to show off some of their products, including organic vegetables, exotic mushrooms, cranberries, Guatemalan crafts, soap and honey.

tors watched lively music from the Andes by Colores Andinos, and a unique form of martial arts, dance and song put on by Brazilian capoeira group, Dende do Recife.

Left to right: The lawn was packed all day with people mingling outside Solstice in Wakefield and checking out a number of fair trade, organic and local products May 3.

Nikki Martell photos

Trevor McMillan served up a whole bunch of tasty hamburgers to fair trade day guests. Over 200 people stopped by the market.

Organic "green juice" made with avocado, lime and maple syrup - who knew? Just one of the quirky products sold at the fair trade event.

Over 200 people stopped by. Inside Solstice, people learned about the fair trade movement and La Peche's responsibilities as a fair trade town. Children were able to bring one item and swap it for another used donation. Visitors sampled fair trade coffee, hot chocolate, and snacks.

The fair trade celebration headed to the Black Sheep from 2 to 5 p.m., where about 100 visi-